Purchase price and security deposit

The purchase price for the dog is EUR _____

A security deposit is a compensation paid for the dog at the time of delivery. The security deposit is no more than half of the dog's purchase price. The parties agree that

- a) The Fosterer does not pay a security deposit for the dog.
b) The Fosterer pays EUR _____ as a security deposit for the dog.

The Transferor refunds the full amount of the security deposit once he/she has, in accordance with this agreement, used the dog for breeding for the first time. Transfer of ownership to the Fosterer has been defined later in this agreement.

The full amount is refunded no later than three months after the birth of the first litter.

If the Transferor does not breed from the dog before the expiration of this agreement, he/she keeps the security deposit.

Breeding rights, breeding use

Rights and obligations

The Fosterer is not allowed to use the male dog at stud during the term of this agreement.

Accidental litter: a litter that is not based on the Transferor's exercise of breeding rights.

An accidental litter of the Fosterer (conceived outside the scope of this agreement) does not reduce the Transferor's rights to exercise his/her breeding rights under this agreement.

Liability for an accidental litter is the contracting party who has been in possession of the dog at the time when the accidental litter was conceived.

Rights and obligations of the Transferor

Breeding rights refer to the Transferor's right to breed three litters from the male dog in accordance with the terms of this agreement.

This agreement does not entitle the Transferor to collect semen from the male dog during the term of agreement, unless the sperm is used for execution of breeding rights under this agreement.

In order to be used for breeding, the male dog must have health results as well as show, trial and/or competition results required of the breed as well as a suitable temperament.

A single puppy that reaches the age of seven weeks is considered a litter.

The breeding rights expire once the male dog reaches five years of age, whether the Transferor has exercised his/her breeding rights or not.

An accidental litter of the Transferor (conceived outside the scope of this agreement) is considered as exercise of breeding rights under this agreement.

During the term of the agreement, the Transferor can keep the possession of the male dog for two weeks in total for health examinations related to breeding. For mating, the Transferor can keep the possession of the male dog for no more than two weeks per mating.

Costs for use at stud

The Transferor is liable for transportation arrangements for the male dog and costs thereof.

The Transferor is liable for the costs for stud use of the male dog:

- health examinations required in the breed's breed-specific breeding programme
- other breeding-related examinations requested by the Transferor
- mating or insemination
- shows, trials, and competitions chosen by the Transferor as well as entry fees, grooming fees, and other similar fees of the dog related to these events

Costs refer to, in all items mentioned above, all costs including necessary travelling, accommodation, and transportation costs. Loss of income, daily allowance, or similar is not subject to compensation without a separate agreement.

The Fosterer is responsible for costs incurred for the customary care of the male dog, such as

- feeding in accordance with instructions provided by the Transferor
- vaccinations in accordance with the vaccination programme
- health care and treatment of diseases where these are not included in the Transferor's liabilities or related to breeding

A separate agreement regarding other than necessary feeding and medication shall be made beforehand.

Show, trial, and competition rights

Parties shall agree on show, trial, and competition rights in writing. Unless the parties agree otherwise, the Transferor is entitled to take the male dog to no more than six (6) Fri–Mon show, trial, or competition events, however, for no more than 24 (twenty-four) days per year.

In other respects, the Fosterer's show, trial, and competition rights have not been restricted. In conflict situations, the Transferor's rights have priority to the above-mentioned extent.

Exercise of rights is subject to mutual agreement made in writing no later than 30 days before the planned event, for instance by email or text message.

Liability for damages

If the dog dies or is injured and it is caused by intent or negligence of either party, the other party is entitled to compensation.

Take out insurance on the dog is recommended.

- Insurance has has not been taken out on the dog
- veterinary care insurance
- life insurance
- liability insurance

The policyholder is the Fosterer the Transferor.

Parties have agreed on the beneficiary and informed this to the insurance company.

Obligation to disclose information

The Transferor confirms to have informed the Fosterer about the judicial and practical meaning of a fosterer agreement as well as about all known typical characteristics of the dog and of the breed, hereditary defects and diseases that occur in the breed as well as the significance of these factors.

AFFIX 1

Instructions

The Transferor confirms to have given the Fosterer breed-specific instructions for care and feeding.

Fosterer's obligations

The Fosterer has acquainted himself/herself with the breed and established its suitability for his/her intended purpose as well as understands the judicial and practical function of a Fosterer agreement. The Fosterer has diligently acquainted himself/herself with the information about the dog and the breed provided by the Transferor.

Delivery of the dog

The dog is delivered to the Fosterer upon signature of this agreement, unless a separate, written agreement stating otherwise is made.

Termination of the agreement

The agreement terminates once the Transferor has exercised his/her breeding rights or no later than once the male dog reaches five years of age.

The ownership of the male dog is transferred to the Fosterer upon termination of the agreement.

A written notification by the Transferor, stating that the Transferor will not exercise his/her breeding rights, terminates the agreement.

Neither party can take the dog from the other without consensus and a written agreement.

If either party finds that the terms of agreement have been breached, the parties ought to seek settlement in the matter, preferably in writing. A party's biased interpretation of a breach of agreement does not terminate the agreement but entitles to enter a claim about cancellation of agreement.

The parties can, by voluntary agreements, agree on cancellation of agreement whenever they wish to do so and, simultaneously, agree on procedure regarding the security deposit and compensation of other expenses.

Parties can insist on cancellation of agreement if either party significantly violates the terms of this agreement.

Where there is doubt about endangering the welfare of the dog on grounds related to animal welfare, the contracting party is obliged to report the matter to a supervising veterinarian.

Parties are bound by the agreement until the terms of the agreement have been met. The Fosterer has no right to redeem the dog during the term of agreement, unless the parties unanimously agree to this in writing.

During the term of agreement, the Fosterer is however entitled to return the dog and the Transferor is obliged to take the dog back, in which case the Transferor keeps the security deposit.

The Transferor cannot, during the term of the agreement, transfer the breeding rights to the male dog to a third party. The Fosterer cannot, during the term of the agreement, transfer the possession of the male dog to a third party, except for short-term care for instance during a holiday.

The Transferor has the right to keep the possession of the dog's registration certificate until ownership has fully transferred to the Fosterer. The Fosterer has the right to receive a copy of the registration certificate.

Settlement of disputes

Disputes regarding this agreement should be resolved through negotiations between the parties.

If no settlement is reached, the parties can contact the Consumer Advisory Service. The consumer party can then refer the dispute to the Consumer Disputes Board (www.kuluttajariita.fi) in order to receive a recommended decision. A final decision to the dispute is obtained by bringing an action before the district court (www.oikeus.fi)

This agreement form has been drawn up by the Finnish Kennel Club to be used when entering into a fosterer agreement for a male dog.

A Transferor, who has signed the Finnish Kennel Club's Breeder's Commitment Declaration or is otherwise obliged to comply with the Finnish Kennel Club's rules and guidelines adopted on the basis thereof,

1. undertakes to make a written agreement
2. can deliver a dog that is at least seven (7) weeks of age
3. has filed a litter registration application and registers the dog
4. sends the registration certificate to the Fosterer no more than two (2) months after the ownership has transferred to the Fosterer. Furthermore, the Transferor guides the Fosterer to transfer the dog into the Fosterer's name in accordance with the Finnish Kennel Club's Dog Registry Guideline.

The Finnish Kennel Club's registration certificate

A registration certificate is given to the buyer and proves that the dog purchased is registered in compliance with the Finnish Kennel Club's Dog Registry Guideline.

If the Transferor does not send the registration certificate within six (6) months after transfer of ownership, the Transferor pays the Fosterer 50 % of the purchase price under this agreement.

Terms of payment and instalment payment

The security deposit can be paid in instalments and receipted by signatures. The Transferor and the Fosterer can also agree that the security deposit or a part of it is paid in instalments after the dog's delivery.
